Chaos in Andover Square

Relaying of the tracks of the Eastern Massachusetts Street railway in Elm square has caused confusion and worse conditions during the past week. Together with digging of a ditch to connect with a manhole at the foot of Elm street, both motorists and pedestrians have passed at their peril in spite of the presence of an extra policeman.

To make matters worse, activities were suspended for twenty-four hours after the rails and paving were removed, so that everyone might have an opportunity to experience the inconvenience.

The closing of Stimpson's bridge during the hardening of the new cement surfaces has also caused confusion to motorists who had been using Railroad avenue and the completed portion of the new cement highway on North Main street.

In addition to the portraits there are delightful drawings illustrating some of the prominent points of Andover history. There are represented "Eliphalet Pearson and his Thirteen Pupils out for a Pleasant Walk"; "Oliver Wendell Holmes Reading 'The School Boy' at the P. A. Centennial, June 6th, 1878"; "Principal Johnson Drives up Phillips Street and Stops to Chat with the Boys of P. A. at Latin Commons"; "Commencement Day at Phillips Academy in the 'Early Thirties'; "General Washington Addresses the Boys of P. Note: they did blow up very often, owing to more enthusiasm than discretion in fueling on the part of the engineer." There are reproductions from old cuts and engravings "Phillips Academy in 1778" and "Phillips Mansion House and Phillips Academy in 1790". There are designed "John Hancock Signs the Act of Incorporation of Phillips Academy, Five persons were injured, two seriously, when a Merrimack automobile crashed into a truck parked on Haverhill road in Amesbury Thursday evening, October 31.

The injured were: Howard H. Carlton, 51 Park street, Andover, who suffered a fracture of the left ankle and multiple contusions of the head and body; William Eaton, 6 Mill street, Merrimack, who sustained multiple abrasions of the head and body and possible internal injuries; his wife, Mrs. Myrtle Eaton, who received a severe scalp wound and a concussion of the brain; his mother, Mrs. William Eaton, Sr., who suffered a laceration over the left eye and a leg injury; and his three year old son, Arthur, who sustained a laceration of the face.

Carlton and Mrs. Myrtle Eaton were taken to the Amesbury hospital in the police ambulance by Police Chief Chester L. Prescott and Officer William Gillespie. They were treated by Dr. William A. Flynn. Later examination revealed that Carlton had suffered a fracture of his ankle and that Mrs. Eaton had sustained a concussion of the brain. Both are in a serious condition but are expected to recover.

The other three injured in the accident were taken to the office of Dr. F. E. Sweetser, Merrimack, where they were treated and later removed to their homes. The full extent of the injuries to William Eaton will not be determined until an examination performed later. Physicians believe that he is suffering from internal injuries.

According to Police Chief Prescott, the Eatons were returning to Merrimack from Amesbury about eleven o'clock in the evening. The car was driven by William Eaton. As the Eaton auto neared the residence of John Clark on Haverhill road it encountered the truck of G. A. Carlton and Sons, Andover. Howard H. Carlton and his brother, Hobart Carlton, occupants of the truck, had parked under an electric light to change the tire. Howard was standing on the side of the truck and Hobart was underneath it.

Eaton told police that he was driving at a moderate rate of speed but did not see the truck until his auto was almost up to it. In an effort to avert the accident Eaton swung his auto sharply to the left but the change of direction was not quick enough to prevent the accident. The auto crashed into the rear of the truck and as it did the left wheels passed over the leg of Howard H. Carlton. The brother under the truck escaped injury.

A fortune awaits the genius who can succeed in crossing the homing pigeon with the umbrella.

METROPOLITAN THEATRE

Orthodox "movie" fans, especially those who admire George Bancroft, will find in "The Mighty" an extraordinary and unusually satisfying bit of screen entertainment. Not only that, but a cast of distinguished stage and screen favorites that would make any picture a genuine attraction.

Interested and the "New Show World" pictures, Paramount has again scored in this latest all-talking thrill-drama which brings Bancroft out as a full-fledged screen star in his own right. With all the advantages that go with a powerful, substantial story it is no wonder that pictures have become the nation's favorite diversion, when such films as "The Mighty" are revealed to the public. Cast with George Bancroft is that glorious bit of femininity, Esther Ralston, together with Warner Oland and Raymond Hutton. Dorothy Revier, another beauty of considerable talent, whose latest film work was in "The Dance of Life", is also featured in addition to Morgan Farley, O. P. Heggie, John Cromwell, Charles Sellon and E. H. Calvert.

Each artist in this highly important cast portrays the various characters with a fidelity deserving of high praise. The dialogue is enhanced by perfect studio recording and also perfect reproduction of the sound effects and talking in the hair-raising outdoor scenes, of which there are many.

As for Bancroft, women will love him; men will cheer him in his latest character portrayal in "The Mighty", destined to increase his following of admirers by many thousands. Already, he is one of the most popular leading film luminaries and the recipient of a tremendous fan mail from all parts of the world.

Action that never lags. Love interest that grips you with its sheer force as it races to a smashing, dramatic climax. That's "The Mighty", and in conclusion, Raymond Hutton injects his artistry for comedy that keeps you laughing at just the right times throughout the unfolding of Paramount's newest addition to the much-talked-of "New Show World" series of greater films.

Morton Downey, the "golden-voiced personality", favorite of New York, London and Paris, has been engaged exclusively for the Metropolitan Theatre for an extended period. Widely known as a screen and radio star his Boston popularity is a foregone conclusion.

Public brings another stage surprise in "Novelties", containing a myriad of musical innovations, featuring Joseph K. Watson, master of mirth, Val & Marion Vestoff, eccentric dancers; the Shickel Marionettes, a modern novelty; Anna Chang, the Chinese star of synopses; and the Gamby Hale dancing ensemble.

The Greater Orchestra will be heard in a brilliant overture presentation, and there will be a special Paramount Sound News.

Arthur Martel returns to the Metropolitan console after an absence of three weeks.

Colleen Moore returns to the Metropolitan screen the week starting Thursday, November 14th, in a talking, singing and dancing spectacle with numerous of its thrilling scenes in natural color. An able cast including Raymond Hackett, Frederic March, Virginia Lee Corbin, and ten other principals, are featured in "Footlights and Fools" the wistful star's latest vehicle.

MAJESTIC THEATRE

The mere announcement of the appearance of the distinguished and well liked actor, Otis Skinner, is usually all that is necessary to cause his myriad admirers to hasten to the playhouse to secure their reservations well in advance. It is a fact known to many theatre goers that Otis Skinner is regarded as a Bostonian, for much of his early stage career was fostered in this city where virtually he won his spurs. In New York and indeed throughout the country, his annual visits are looked forward to with keen pleasure from the fact that he is always sure to give a performance that is always uplifting and grateful.

This season Mr. Skinner's efforts are centered on a unique and unusually skillful character, in a comedy by the distinguished Spanish authors the Brothers Quintero, which has been put into English by Helen and Harley Granville-Barker. Mr. Skinner gave the comedy for fourteen consecutive weeks in Chicago last year and he comes to the Majestic direct from the Lyceum theatre, New York, where he was acclaimed alike by the astute play reviewers of that city and by his large following created by years of true artistic and appealing productions.

During Mr. Skinner's engagement, which is for two weeks only, the matinees will be given on Wednesday and Saturday at the Majestic theatre, Boston, beginning Monday evening, November 11th.

Four Million Christmas Seals Arrive

With the arrival of supplies for the annual sale of Christmas seals, officials of the Essex County Health Association are busy preparing mailing lists and letters to be mailed to the prospective purchasers.

The supplies received here include more than $15,000 worth of seals and bonds in denominations of $5, $10, $25, $50, and $100 each.

The bonds will be sold to those desirous of giving large sums to the organization and not having any need for a large number of seals. Motion pictures, slides and other advertising matter also was included in the shipment which was sent here by the state association.

The campaign proper will get under way immediately after Thanksgiving, and merchants throughout the County have been asked to purchase the seals for use on statements sent out the first of that month.

The mailing lists for individual purchasers are being obtained by means of telephone directories, club rosters, and lists of tax payers.

The goal this year has been set at $15,360 and the workers are making every effort to reach or surpass that amount.

CARTOGRAPH DECORATION

June 6th, 1778" and "Paul Revere Delivers the Seal of Phillips Academy to John Lowell and Oliver Wendell April 5th, 1782".

Andover's connection with historical events of the nation are beautifully pictured in vivid colors. Under a picture of "Old Ironsides" is Oliver Wendell Holmes' famous poem of that name. The flag with its thirteen stars is represented, for it was designed in this same year Phillips academy was founded. The year 1778. The first line of Samuel Francis Smith's "America" is printed with the history of its composition in the Smith House on Main street.

The various main buildings of the academy are all represented: the old farmhouse, Elphaleet Pearson's red school house, Bulfinch Hall, the Stone academy, and finally Samuel Phillips Hall and the main quadrangle of George Washington, Pearson and Samuel F. B. Morse Halls in a large tableau in the foreground. Students of 1830 and students of 1929 are depicted on either side.

The painting is done in oils on a sort of wood pulp. Its size, seven feet by thirteen feet, is so great that it had to be divided into four panels, held together by steel bands, in the center of which is an impression in gold from the original Phillips Academy seal. The painting was surveyed for the first time by the American Geographical Society during the work on the map. The scale is 160.5 feet to one inch.

On exhibition in the Reading room are photographs of other examples of Mr. Travis' work in cartography, including the "History of Virginia", a "History of Piracy in the West Indies", and a "Chart of the World Showing History of Navigation and Discovery".

At the very bottom of the chart is printed in four columns the history of Phillips Academy, which is quoted as follows:

Phillips academy in Andover was founded by Samuel Phillips, Jr., with the financial assistance of his father, Esquire Phillips of Andover, and his uncle, John Phillips, LL. D., of Exeter, New Hampshire, in 1778, the darkest year of the Revolution, that the education of youth might not be neglected, the faith of the Puritans forgotten, and the new hope of democracy still-born. In the constitution of the new academy the founders stated their resolve to make "a noble dedication to the Republic of Letters, to the ability wherewith he has blessed us, to lay the foundation of a public free school or academy for the purpose of instructing Youth, not only in English and Latin Grammar, Writing, Arithmetic, and those Sciences wherein they are commonly taught; but more especially to train the great end and real business of living."

The school was opened April 30, 1778, with Elphaleet Pearson as Preceptor, in a small carpenter's shop, on the corner of the present Main and Phillips streets. There were thirteen pupils. The last act passed by the General Court was the Provincial Charter of Massachusetts, October 4, 1780, incorporated Phillips academy, Paul Revere designed and cut the seal. In 1786 a larger school building was erected on the corner of Main and Salem streets. George Washington sent from Virginia one nephew and six grand-nephews to be educated here. In 1808 the Theological Seminary was founded, bringing many eminent scholars to Andover Hill. In 1817 Pearson hall was designed by Charles Bulfinch. When the academy building burned in 1818, Bulfinch designed a new brick school house, now called Bulfinch hall, and that gracious and dignified architecture has been the inspiration for the academy buildings of to-day.

The school at one time forgot its founders' purpose to instruct youth in "the great end and real business of living". Under the Calvinist faith of the founders, and under the influence of the allied sciences, discipline was severe and character building, linked with strict religious observance. No boy was denied admission because of poverty or lack of social station. Boys and young men from surrounding farms, then from all New England, and later from an expanding nation, came to Andover to receive their education in school life, each according to his ability and character. This was a tradition built deep into the spirit of the school.

In 1786 Elphaleet Pearson was succeeded as principal by Ebenezer Pemberton, and Mark Newman succeeded him in 1795. The fourth principal was John Adams, serving from 1810 to 1833, who strove constantly to stimulate the boys by religious revivals. Osgood Johnson followed, and in 1837 Samuel Harvey Taylor was chosen sixth principal. He served until his death in 1871. A man of imposing personality, an ardent classicist, and intolent of mediocrity, he built for character through scholarship and left an abiding impression on the school. Frederic William Tilton, the next in order, resigned in 1873 on account of illness, and Cecil Patch Bancroft was elected the eighth principal, serving until 1901. He came at a time of rapid national expansion, when political and economic changes were taking place and modern science was revolutionizing the conditions, and even the convictions, under which we live.

He recognized the need of increased equipment and endowment, and he strengthened the faculty and revised and broadened the curriculum to meet the demands of a new age. But the traditional emphasis on character was not slackened, nor the democratic ideal of the Founders lowered.

Alfred Ernest Stearns, ninth principal, took office in 1903, to find a school grown so large it could not properly be contained in existing buildings. It was his task to develop what Doctor Bancroft had begun. Aided by the removal of the Seminary to Cambridge, a new Phillips academy, spacious, beautiful, and enduring was built on and around the Seminary site.

Alumni and friends of the school were inspired to give, with noble generosity. Here, in 1789, President Washington addressed the undergraduates; here, in 1825, Marquis de Lafayette saluted the boys of a younger generation. Here Samuel Francis Smith wrote our national anthem, "America", and here Harriet Beecher Stowe had her home. The poets, Oliver Wendell Holmes and John Gould Fletcher, have commemorated their school days in verse. Samuel Finley Breese Morse, artist and inventor of the telegraph has added fame to the school.

Phillips boys have welcomed Andrew Jackson, Daniel Webster, Franklin Pierce, Theodore Roosevelt, and William Howard Taft. In 1928 President Coolidge emphasized anew the principles on which the Academy was founded.

By the inspiration of noble traditions, beauty and a democratic ideal, a respect for character and scholarship, a patriotism made vivid forever by the Memorial Tower, the Andover student is surrounded in his most impressionable years.

Generations have wrought behind him; the history of his school is the history of his nation. Into these walls are built the best hopes of his fathers, and through them he may find his way to "the great end and real business of living".

Punchard 0-Exeter 7

The Punchard High school football team was defeated Saturday afternoon on the Andover playground when they clashed with the old and traditional rivals, the team from Exeter High school of Exeter, N. H. Exeter came out foremost by the score of 7 to 0 after a hard-fought and grueling game replete with long thrilling runs and equally thrilling repulses.

The only score of the game came in the first quarter when in the opening moments of the game the Exeter backs brought the ball into scoring distance of the Andover goal and Naimee with a plunge through center carried the ball over the last chalk line. Carboneau made a neat placement kick after the touchdown, although his teammate Bruce was hurt on the play and had to be relieved by Kucharski.

Twice, Eugene Lovely's team brought the ball to the 14-yard line of their opponent's field, but could seem to get no further than that marker although almost every sort of play was used. The first time after a trick play from Gouck to Walker, Walker ran 36 yards before he was downed on the fourteen yard line. On the next play, the Punchard backs were not able to gain an inch and an end run netted a loss of two yards. Following the plays Walker tried two forward passes but he was smeared by the Exeter line as the ball was about to leave his hands the first time, and the second pass was grounded. The ball was given to Exeter on downs and Carboneau kicked the ball near the center of the field.

With but a few minutes to play in the last quarter Punchard brought the ball to Exeter's 14-yard line after a pass from Walker to Asonian netted 14 yards, another from Walker to Gouck, four yards and Exeter was penalized 15 yards when a player interfered with Pearson while he was catching the third successive pass.

Punchard lost yardage on a fumble, however, and after an incomplete pass Exeter had regained possession of the ball on their 20-yard line when the final whistle was blown.

In the first two quarters of the game Exeter was easily the better team, protecting their backs with excellent interference and seeming able to gain at any time and by any means. After the half, Coach Lovely seemed to have inspired his charges, for time and time again they plunged through the New Hampshire line and completed a number of forward passes. Punchard lacked the needed punch to put the ball over the goal line when they were in scoring distance.

John Kopecki was easily the star of the winning team and as he did when his team lost to Methuen several weeks ago, he gained continuously and made several excellent tackles. Gouck of Andover starred for his team and his long runs and elusiveness were a great credit to the Andover schoolboys.

Both teams were forced to use several substitutes as a number of players on both sides were injured during the hard play. Exeter was penalized 15 yards in the third quarter for unnecessary roughing when an Exeter player seized Walker and tried to carry him back several yards.

The lineup was as follows:

Shelter Given Man Who Later Dies

After a little more than a half hour in a cell in the Andover police station last Monday afternoon, Thomas Lynch, aged about 62 of Buxton court, died at 5.30 o'clock. Death may have been due to apoplexy.

Lynch, who was hauled to the station, although he was at the Andover station, having been removed there from the Merrimack Card Clothing company plant on Buxton court. Officials of the clothing company said the man had been hanging around outside the establishment since early morning, and sometime in the afternoon he was brought into the store to give him shelter from the rain.

At 4.50 o'clock police were notified when it became apparent that he was not in good condition. Officers John Devermond and David Gillespie went after Lynch and brought him to the police station where they placed him on a cot in the cell. Dr. Jeremiah J. Daly, Andover selectman, was called and said that Lynch appeared to be coming out all right.

Officer Gillespie went in the cell with Lynch after the doctor left and noticed that the man's breathing was slower. He hurried after the doctor, who returned, and saw that Lynch's condition had become critical, and Rev. John B. Leonard, O. S. A., stationed at St. Augustine's church, was summoned.

Before the priest arrived, however, Lynch died. He had worked for some time for the Board of Public Works and was more recently employed as a laborer at Phillips academy.

He is survived by his wife, Mary, and daughter, Helen, of Sweeney court. Deceased had been living with Robert E. Ross on Buxton court. The body was turned over to Undertaker Lundgren by the police and was later removed to the undertaking parlors of Michael Burke in South Lawrence.

Andover 0; New Hampshire Freshmen 14
In the last preliminary game of the season Andover was beaten by the New Hampshire Freshmen by the score 14-0. Andover used only its second team and its Gray Jerseys saving the regulars for Exeter this Saturday. New Hampshire's first score was on the opening play of the second quarter, when MacGowan crossed the line on a long end run. The second touchdown was made by a criss-cross in the last quarter, also by MacGowan. Both goals were successful. Batchelder in the Blue line distinguished himself more than once by spectacular tackles. In the last period the entire Gray Jersey Team replaced the second Blue Team and acquitted themselves nobly against the powerful Freshman varsity.

Takes Part in Golden Anniversary of Northfield Schools

Students and alumnae from forty-eight states and fifty-five countries joined hands and hearts here Saturday to commemorate the Golden Anniversary of the founding of the Northfield Schools by the world renowned evangelist, Dwight L. Moody. Participating in the exercises were three of the first sixteen students who fifty years ago to a day trudged through sixteen inches of snow to the Moody home which he had turned into the first Seminary building as the result of having been driven by a zealous urge to give up a profitable business to help ambitious youth to an education and to a better life.

Conducting a revival in California at the time, Mr. Moody addressed the student body by letter: "I pray God that on this day streams of influence will be started that will go out to bless the world." Since that day, over 21,000 students have passed the portals of Mount Hermon School for Boys, and Northfield Seminary, constituting The Northfield Schools, to lives of greater usefulness in the home, the office and the schoolroom.

Following Saturday's services in the Russell Sage Memorial Chapel the three members of the class of '79, Miss Nancy E. Comins, Hadley, Mass., Mrs. Lulu Newton Tyler, South Vernon Mass., and Mrs. Harriet Fisher Clark of Derry, N. H. were greeted at Mr. Moody's birthplace and re-introduced to Northfield Seminary's first buildings by members of the Freshman class garbed in the dresses the three wore at the time they entered the Seminary a half century ago.

At the close of Saturday's ceremonies, the three members of the first Seminary class were entertained by Elliott Spear, President of the Northfield schools, and Miss Myra Wilson, principal of the Northfield Seminary.

The Northfield schools are today represented in Massachusetts by 3487 alumnae and students.

Gypsy: "I tell your fortune, Mister."
Student: "How much?"
Gypsy: "Twenty-five cents."
Student: "Correct, howja guess it?"

The Warfare Against Cancer

Cancer is a disease against which improved sanitation is not capable of producing any effect and personal hygiene has but a limited application. It is, therefore, necessary to attack this scourge in some other way.

The organized warfare against cancer which is being carried on in all civilized countries aims to discover the individual cases of the disease at the earliest possible moment and provide competent medical attention for the patient. There must be hospital and home care of a proper kind.

The public must give full cooperation to the medical profession, for it is obviously impossible for a physician to render any help unless the patient applies for it. The first thing then is for the public to learn the danger signals of cancer and report immediately to a medical man upon suspicion being aroused that cancer is present or impending.

Hospital and medical men must be prepared to deal effectively with the patients who come to them. Fortunately, there are excellent hospitals throughout the United States and competent surgeons are to be found nearly everywhere.

A second important line of attack is research. More facts about cancer need to be discovered; how and why it occurs, by what procedure it may be prevented and cured. There is a good deal of information upon these subjects already, but there is need of more.

Cancer researches are being prosecuted in many institutes and hospitals and by not a few physicians and surgeons privately. The records of all this work are printed in medical journals, some of which are devoted exclusively to cancer. There is hardly an association of physicians or surgeons in America which does not assign a considerable part of its program to the discussion of cancer.

A hopeful outlook should exist among those who are engaged in the warfare against cancer. The public is becoming rapidly aroused to the need of cooperating and giving financial support to the forces engaged in this great conflict. Everybody should give it eager assistance.

Dual Citizenship

The press announcement that the Italian Government has decided not to call for military service young men born or naturalized in any American country is rather startling. Many who read it wonder whence came the idea that it was possible for an official of the Mussolini Administration to send for a man born of Italian parents in Boston, or in some other American city, to enter Army barracks in Milan or Naples.

The amazement is increased when the text of the semi-official communication is examined. It contains the explanation that in times of peace the Royal Italian Government, finding that it has as much military material as the budget permits, is not going to impose military duties "on citizens residing in far-away countries," for instance transoceanic countries.

It is also explained that such persons will not be asked to enter the Army in Italy when visiting there. Whether they carry passports issued by Italian authorities or by the authorities of countries where they were born will make no difference, provided there is no war.

The whole matter is puzzling until one realizes that this is only a new chapter in the long struggle of the great immigrant Nation of the world, the United States, to establish, as a principle, the right of an individual to expatriate himself.

All Americans, except the original 100 per centers who were pushed aside because of their copper-colored skins, came from overseas. Many of them had fled thither for refuge from conditions or from Governments they most earnestly wished to leave behind. In 1790 the first United States Congress began its offer of full and equal citizenship to the foreign born.

That was something rather new in the world. In Europe people had been real estate. In the country they had belonged to the estates on which they had been born. They were also subjects of monarchs, and it was unthinkable to the conservative mind of Europe that a subject could transfer his allegiance.

This point of view was recognized by such eminent American jurists as John Marshall and Joseph Story. The French Revolution, however, had undermined the theory that people belonged to Government, even when they had left the territory over which the Government exercised authority.

Whenever a King in Europe desired recruits for an army he was likely to reassert the ancient theory. Our War of 1812 was fought over the notion that an Englishman once was an Englishman for life. In accordance with it, American ships were held up and sailors claimed by the English were taken off.

In 1848 James Buchanan, then Secretary of State, sent word to George Bancroft, our Minister to England, that the United States expected foreign Governments to receive and treat all Americans alike, whether native-born or naturalized. Two decades later an act of Congress declared the right of expatriation which meant the right of a man to become a citizen of this country, even though he or his parents had been born somewhere else.

However, Europe, especially when there was need of cannon fodder, has been rather stubborn in sticking to the old theory. In 1914 many thousands, American by birth or by naturalization, crossed the Atlantic to present themselves to the military authorities of the countries whence they or their fathers had come. Some went because they wanted to go, but there were others who feared inconveniences afterward if they stayed away.

Sometimes the condition of a man recognized by one Nation as a citizen and claimed by another as a citizen-subject is spoken of as "dual citizenship." People know what it means, but it is rather stretching the words. Neither the old Nation nor the new recognizes dual citizenship, although there have been officials, in moments of absent-mindedness, who have appeared to admit that a person can belong to two countries. In one of his speeches President McKinley slipped into apparent acceptance of dual allegiance. And Mr. Robert Lansing, as Secretary of State, officially told a young man of French parentage, but born in the United States, that he had apparently been born with a dual nationality.

Premier Mussolini's reassertion of the doctrine that a person who has been born of Italian parents in another country is an Italian brings up the subject anew. Of course it is out of line with modern thought, which regards people as having the right of self-determination if they move to another country and gain admission to its citizenship. But the right of voluntary expatriation remains to be established by universal acceptance, however obvious it seems to the greatest immigrant Nation of the world.—Uncle Dudley in The Boston Daily Globe

Royal Dadsun Concert

Royal Dadsun, experienced baritone, and one of America's own sons, is coming to Abbot academy to give a song recital on Saturday afternoon, November 16th.

Mr. Dadsun, when a very young man, went to New York from his home in the Berkshires to see if the larger city would put its stamp of approval in what was thought to be an outstanding talent. If it were considered unusual, he would stay.

Before long, Strauss of the New York Philharmonic and Oberholzer of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra heard him and took him on tour. Since then Dadsun has sung with all the important Orchestras and Oratorio societies of the country.

Mr. Dadsun has a baritone voice of great richness, mellowness and range. That, combined with his poetic appreciation and natural musical sensibility, puts him on the list as one of our great American artists.

Admission of one dollar will be taken at the door.

He started in Philadelphia and when transferred to the Lawrence office seventeen years ago, he came to establish a home here with his family.

Herbert is president of an advertising concern in New Orleans. Robert, the youngest of the eight children, is a student in Stowe school.

Since the approach of the anniversary, the happy couple have received numerous gifts, flowers, cards, and other messages of a congratulatory nature. The home was decorated with flowers. A catered dinner was served the guests coming from out-of-town.

Celebrates Thirtieth Anniversary

Mrs. John Maurice Ahern of Liverpool, England, founder of the Andover Mothers' club was the guest of honor at the thirtieth anniversary tea held Wednesday afternoon at the Andover Guild. Women with whom she had been associated many years ago in establishing a closer and more helpful relationship between the school and the home, as well as the younger people whom she had known as pupils in the kindergarten, took great pleasure in renewing acquaintance with an old friend whose gracious personality was unchanged since the days when she was known in Andover as Miss Evelyn Reed.

Mrs. Ahern gave a very interesting talk on "Education and Peace in England" which has been her home for more than twenty years. Mrs. Ahern acted as a delegate to the international peace conference in Dublin. She has also formed a Mothers' club in Liverpool similar to that in Andover. Mrs. Joseph Dumont, the presiding officer, presented her with a beautiful bouquet in behalf of the club. Refreshments of sandwiches, cake and ice cream were served by the hospitality committee and each of the seventy guests were presented with a souvenir.

Harvard Club Holds Ladies' Night

Forty members of the Andover Harvard club and their friends were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius A. Wood at "Arden" on Wednesday evening, when the club observed ladies' night. C. Carleton Kimball presided.

Dr. Roger Bigelow Merriman, Gurney professor of history at Harvard University, was the guest of honor and spoke on education and the status of Harvard as a university. "Teaching is the noblest of professions and has the greatest opportunities," said Dr. Merriman. "Only in recent years has it been recognized with adequate financial rewards." He believes that there is a great field in improving the opportunities in work with boys between the ages of eight and twelve, English schools for boys of that age being much more successful than ours. "English school boys surpass those of America in information; they have less mental power, and a greater ability to conceal their ignorance," said the speaker.

Great strides have been made at Harvard in the last thirty years under President Eliot and President Lowell and the undergraduate of today has greater interest in intellectual matters than he had several decades ago. Harvard is recognized as the peer of the best universities abroad. The arrangement of having exchange professors has been most beneficial and the practice will continue to become more general, and to be chosen as scholarship students in American universities is considered a great honor.

At the close of his talk, Dr. Merriman answered questions about the plans of Harvard in its future developments.

Refreshments were served and a social hour enjoyed.

Summary of Work of Andover Vacation Church School

The council of the Vacation Church School makes the following appeal for support to the churches:

The second session of the Andover Vacation Church School, held last July in the John Dove and S. C. Jackson Schools under the trained leadership of Miss Jean Potter, was very successful. We believe that it was of real benefit to all concerned, and therefore to all the church schools and the town itself. One hundred pupils were enrolled and the average daily attendance was 88 percent. The smaller enrollment resulted in much more satisfactory work being done, and paying the Department heads ensured more effective continuity of instruction.

As only two of the churches made provision for the School in their budgets, the necessary funds were again raised by individual contributions, half of the amount being secured through personal solicitation, over a period of a number of weeks, by the registrar, Miss Caroline Abbott. The Council feels that the demonstrated value of the enterprise warrants the support of the churches and respectfully asks your church to appropriate some such sum as suggested herewith and to appoint three persons as your representatives on the Council. It is hoped next year to hold a five weeks' session, beginning June 30. Detailed information as to the scope of the work is available if desired and we shall hope to hear favorably from you in the near future.

Resolutions in the Name of the South Church

Seventeen months ago the South church in Andover accepted the resignation of its minister, Rev. E. Victor Bigelow, and at that time recorded its grateful sense of his efficiency, his inspiring presence and words, his large and warm friendliness, his helpfulness to old and young, during the fifteen years then past.

Since that time, while he has still made his home among us, we have learned yet more of his cheerfulness and steady courage, his playfulness and his geniality, his playfulness and his growing infirmity of his stalwart strength and have shared the anxiety of his family in their loving vigilance on his behalf.

And now that he has gone out by permission through the gates of death into the new life, we would express for the South church our feeling of personal loss, though it is for his exceeding gain, and we assure Mrs. Bigelow and her children of our deep sympathy with them.

Abbott Academy Notes

Bradford Day has passed into history as the first Play Day attempted by the schools. The immense amount of organization that enabled about three hundred and sixty-four girls to participate simultaneously in a variety of games, received its reward in the success of the undertaking. For the first time it was possible to stay with the guests from Bradford all through the day; there was no division of schools on either side of a playing field, and a feeling of friendliness and mutual interest had a real chance to develop. The hour of the games, the luncheon with the fine singing which followed, the riding and relays, all bore out the spontaneous friendliness of the English country dance which began the program as a most colorful and graceful "ice breaker." Every member of the Abbott household cooperated to the utmost with the physical director, Miss Mary Carpenter, and helped to make Saturday, November third, memorable.

Miss Ann Wiggins at the Sunday evening service on November 3, gave many illustrations of the struggles of the young people of Europe toward their goal of education.

Under Helen Simpson's management, a Hallowe'en party was enjoyed in Davis Hall on Tuesday evening, November 5. Jere Schell and Leonore Hezlett received the prize for the most effective costume, Jane Goodell for the funniest, Betty Scott for the most carefully thought out, with honorable mention for Mary Rockwell.

Professor R. Seymour Conway of Manchester, England, chosen by the American Classical League as one of the leading scholars to lecture in the United States and in Canada in connection with the Vergil bimillennium, talked on the subject, "Vergil's School Days" in Davis hall at 8:15 o'clock on Thursday evening, November 7.

Dr. Faith L. Meserve will give her third hygiene lecture on Saturday afternoon, November 9, in Abbot hall. In the evening, the Hampton singers will present a program and this will take the place of the usual Sunday evening service.

Since the element of competition was, of course, missing from Bradford Day, the course of events on Gargoyles-Griffin Day, Wednesday November 13, will be followed with great excitement. The intramural sports between two evenly-matched teams of Abbot girls will give aid to the accumulating of points which Gargoyles and Griffins are treasuring.

The program of Royal Dadsman, baritone is mentioned elsewhere in the paper.

Scotch Story No. 7837

Two Scotchmen took dinner together in a restaurant. After dinner, the waiter brought the check. The two sat and talked for a couple of hours, after which conversation failed, and they merely smoked in silence. At one a.m. one of them got up and telephoned to his wife.

"Dinna wait up any longer for me, lass," he said, "it looks like a deadlock."

MISS HELEN O'HAGAN

Miss Helen O'Hagan, fourteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward O'Hagan of Essex street, passed away early last Friday morning at the Lawrence General hospital, following an illness of three weeks' duration with pneumonia. The Gregorian mass was chanted by the choir and at the offertory Miss Katherine E. Donovan rendered Korman's "Pie Jesu." Miss Annie G. Donovan, organist, played the "Hymn to the Guardian Angel" as the body was borne from the church to its last resting place in the family lot in St. Augustine's cemetery. Rev. John B. Leonard, O. S. A., conducted services at the grave.

JOHN PETERS STEVENS

Last week at Plainfield, New Jersey in the death of John Peters Stevens, North Andover and New England lost a son peculiarly their own.

In a house, in North Andover, built on the hill which the settlers of the plantation of Andover made the center of their colony, he was born February 2, 1868. The north windows of that house look out on the old graveyard and side by side lie the graves of Andrew Peters, son of a squire in Cornwall, England, founder of the Peters family in New England, and John Stevens of Caversham, England, founder of the Stevens family in New England.

Young John Peters Stevens was richly endowed by his ancestry; from one side inheriting unusual capacity of intellectual grasp, from the other remarkable business ability.

Handicapped in childhood by the loss of his mother, Susan Peters and his father Horace Nathaniel Stevens, he grew up with his brothers and sisters a very sensitive boy.

His education was finished with two years at Phillips Academy at Andover and his business career started at the early age of sixteen years in the business house of Faulkner Page & Co., commission merchants in Boston. His transference after three years to their New York office, considered a wider field of activity, proves that his ability was soon recognized.

He married in 1895 Edna Ten Broeck, daughter of Van Rensselaer Ten Broeck, descendant of one of the Dutch settlers of New York.

In 1899 was established in New York the firm of J. P. Stevens & Co., commission merchants, of which John Peters Stevens was the head.

From then on, his character and ability brought him many honors. He served as president of the Association of Cotton Textile Merchants and the American Association of Woolen and Worsted Manufacturers. He was director of the Central Hanover Bank and Trust Co. in New York and he also held directorships in the Plainfield Trust Company, M. T. Stevens & Sons Co., Stevens Linen Works, Arragon Baldwin Cotton Mills, Watts Mills, Duneh Mills, the Lawrence Manufacturing Company and various other textile enterprises. His work as an organizer is cited by a Professor at Yale University in one of his business courses.

In his social contacts the modesty and charm of his manners brought him many friends. He belonged to the Union League Club, also the Manhattan and Merchants Clubs of New York, the Plainfield Country club of which he had been president, the Sleepy Hollow club, the North Andover Country club and he was a member of the New England Society.

His interest in civic affairs was shown by serving for many years as governor of Muhlenberg hospital, a trustee of the Plainfield Community Chest, president of the Children's Home, and by giving his support and the benefit of his excellent judgment to many other projects for civic improvement in the town where he lived.

During the War he worked as one of the vice-chairmen of the Industries Division in the Greater New York United War Work Campaign. It was said that he was sought as a chairman of committees because he had a way of asking for work or money which no one could refuse.

His eldest son, John Peters Stevens, Jr., with the encouragement of his father and mother did his part in the war by training at Yale, Harvard, Saumur and Angers for his short service at the front before the Armistice.

His second son, Robert Ten Broeck Stevens, trained with the Yale artillery ready for France at the time of the Armistice.

Nathaniel Stevens, the third son, was too young to go. John Peters Stevens sent all three of his sons to Phillips Academy at Andover.

Into sixty-one short years of life John Peters Stevens crowded more work and enjoyment than most men into three score years and ten.

He, with his wife, whose encouragement was never lacking, and his three sons, travelled widely in the United States and in Europe believing in the education of seeing for themselves.

Last August in Harrogate, England, he was taken suddenly ill. His undaunted spirit and his gallant fight for life won the admiration and unstinted devotion of all about him. Brought home by his devoted wife, sons, and son's wives, through the courage and cooperation of an English doctor an English matron and nurses he lived a few days, long enough to see some of the ten grandchildren he loved before his spirit fled.

To one who knew and understood the strength of his modest unassuming character it seems fitting that the Andovers and New England should know that the souls of pioneer Andrew Peters and pioneer John Stevens are marching on through many generations.

"How do you know it was a stork and not an angel that brought your little brother?" "Well, I heard daddy complaining about the size of the bill, and angels don't have bills!"

Letter Written en Route to Peking

The following extracts are taken from a letter received by the Misses Carter of Bartlett street from their brother Edward C. Carter of New York. Mr. Carter has just completed a trip, via Siberia to Kyoto to attend the third biennial conference of the Institute of Pacific Relations.

En Route Mukden to Peking

October 2, 1929

The twenty-four hours in Harbin were so crammed with vivid and varied impressions that I thought you would be interested in at least a catalog of them, so here goes!

Next to Moscow, Harbin is the most interesting city we have visited. It is certainly one of the most international cities in the world. This is emphasized by the fact that four or five racial and political groups are struggling for power. The anti-Nationalist Chinese, the pro-Nationalist Chinese, the White Russians, the Red Russians, and a little Japanese nucleus who fear that if either the Chinese or the Russians get permanent control of the Chinese Eastern Railroad, the precedent will be established for the later seizure of the South Manchurian Railroad from the Japanese and the loss by Japan of the millions of money invested in the railroad and in industry and agriculture throughout Manchuria. The Russians and the Japanese have been the great railroad pioneers in Manchuria and have opened up the country for millions of Chinese who have migrated from war and famine-ridden parts of China to the grain lands of Manchuria, where prosperity comes quickly through the richness of the soil and the facilities which the railway offers for the quick sale of agricultural products.

The following is a sort of time table by nationalities of our twenty-four hours in Harbin:

a. Awakened in the Chinese Eastern Railway sleeping car, and served Russian tea by the Russian sleeping-car porter;

b. Told of the general layout of Harbin as we approached the city, by a Hungarian (Harbin agent of Munich beer) who was returning after a visit to Europe;

c. Taken by our two Japanese friends in an American car to the Hotel Moderne which has a French name, a Russian manager and Chinese servants;

d. Driven for two hours around the city by our Japanese friends and a Japanese chauffeur in a car of the South Manchurian Railway Company;

e. We visited the Chinese Eastern Railroad Museum, showing the natural resources of Manchuria. The curator is now Chinese and his assistants are Russian;

f. We called at the Yokumam Hotel (Japanese management) for mail and for my copies of the New York Times;

g. For lunch we entertained J. B. Powell, the Far Eastern correspondent of the Chicago Tribune and editor of China Weekly Review, Shanghai; and Paul Wright, Far Eastern correspondent of the Chicago Daily News; Vincent Shen of the Commercial Department of the Chinese Eastern Railroad; and Mrs. Shen, who is Russian. After lunch Shen introduced us to the Acting General Manager of the Chinese Eastern Railroad, Fang Chi Kuan. We also met a Canadian named Clark who has been in business in Harbin for years and who now makes a handsome living through dealing in exchange.

h. We were then taken by a White Russian lady, Mrs. Ilyin, the correspondent in Harbin of the London Times, in a French automobile with a Russian driver, to the Russian cathedral. This was crowded with Russians. A marvelous choir sang and the air was heavy with incense. It was so jammed that the only way we could get in was to be taken up a narrow winding staircase to the choir loft, which was also crowded. There was a funeral ceremony in progress, for a Russian lady who had been murdered (for money) in broad daylight near her house two blocks away from the cathedral the morning before. Then visited Russian institutions for sailors' orphans, for Russian street children, and a Russian old ladies' home.

Then we went to see a meat-packing factory on the edge of the town. As it was Sunday afternoon, the factory was not running but we were taken into the home of the owner-manager, Mr. Leonid B. Gorenberg, and thus visited the first Russian home of our entire trip. Mr. Gorenberg is a White Russian, his wife who was an actress who came from Leningrad, calls herself a Red. Both of them were intensely interested in everything we told them of our experience in Moscow, each eager to get data to prove his or her own point of view, but playful withal. They both were very broadminded and both very much interested in all sides of the question. They showered gracious hospitality upon us and showed an almost breathless eagerness to know what was going on in Moscow. Mrs. Gorenberg had last year returned to Leningrad to get some of her precious family paintings and their presence in the drawing-room was clearly a great source of pleasure to them and a visible link with the old regime.

Mrs. Ilyin took us to her cottage to visit her two daughters whom she supports, I imagine, on a very small margin on a very modest income from occasional articles for the Times and through translation and interpreting work. Her daughters aged eight and fifteen had perfect manners, courtesy on meeting us, even though the only lights in the cottage were candles. The elder daughter is studying typing at the business school of the American Y. M. in Harbin, which is run for the benefit of the Russians. There is of course a Chinese Y. M. C. A. in the city as well. The daughters hoped to complete their education in either Paris or New York, the elder daughter being interested in painting.

1. Our friends took our party to a Russian cabaret for dinner, (Kasbek's). Here in addition to much good Russian food, and American and Russian jazz by an excellent Russian orchestra, we saw Chinese, Japanese, gypsies, Russians, Americans, Germans, and probably several other nationalities dancing together in spontaneous gaiety.

Hardly a table at Kasbek's was without interest. At one was sitting the son of the famous Russian timber concessionaire who was said to be the maker of Marshal Chang Tso Lin. At another sat an elderly Chinese who had been political adviser to one of the former Peking Governments and was now reputed to be a political adviser to the young Marshal Chang Hsueh Liang. Larry Leibras, the Far Eastern Manager of Fox Movietones, who has movietoned almost every famous person in the Far East and filmed the Chinese armies in action both at Manchuli and Pograditchayna, came over to our table and was introduced and entertained us with a flow of interesting talk.

At breakfast the next morning just before leaving for the train, we were joined by Cochran, the American Y. M. C. A. secretary who runs the Russian Y. M. in Harbin and has a Russian wife. Our Japanese friends motored us to the station. Russian and Chinese porters put us and our bags in our compartments,—my fellow passengers were a Russian working man and his wife and three children, a samovar, four mattresses and huge quantities of black bread, milk and vegetables. He had an American victrola which rendered excellent Russian music until his wife and the three children fell asleep.

Between Harbin and Changchung we met about two thousand soldiers marching.

Harbin was planned by imperial Russia on an imperial scale. A few decades ago I suppose it was just a collection of huts. Now there are about two hundred thousand Russians and three hundred and fifty thousand Chinese, with the city growing so fast that it may easily reach the million mark in another few years. It is the center of one of the richest agricultural areas in the whole world and has vast possibilities of future development. The Russians used to call it the Moscow of the East; the Chinese call it Northern Shanghai. Some day Americans may call it the Western Chicago.

"Inside" Information

Cottage cheese for sandwiches may be moistened with a little cream, with salad dressing, or with tomato catsup.

Fresh tomatoes can be filled with almost any left-over meat or vegetables for a stuffed tomato salad. A filling made of chopped meat, such as chicken, veal, or tongue, cooked peas, chopped pickle or cucumber, and salad dressing, is very good. After the tomatoes have been peeled and scooped out they should be seasoned inside with salt, turned upside down to drain, and placed in the ice-box until time to fill and serve them.

Veal chops have less fat in proportion to lean meat than other chops. They are likely to dry out considerably in cooking unless protected by a coating of egg and bread crumbs.

See that the foods your child eats include each day all of these different kinds of foods: milk, eggs, meat, or fish; vegetables, fruit, whole-grain cereals, and butter or cream.

Don't wait for Thanksgiving or Christmas to make cranberry jelly or cranberry sauce. Either one is excellent with any meat where a sweet-tart accessory is liked. Cranberries are on the market now.

Farmers' Bulletin 1497-F contains much useful information about laundering clothes, and some suggestions about ironing them. How to fold a man's shirt, tablecloths, and other flat pieces, and how to wash sweaters, curtains, blankets, pillows and infants' woollens are among the practical directions found therein.

A cream colored collar is often more becoming on a wool dress than a white one, unless the background of the dress material requires white. Cream and ecru are often used because they blend well with other colors. Plain colors are better for collars on figured material, because they emphasize the face which is the natural center of interest.

Try this: Place an unopened can of salmon in a saucpan surrounded by boiling water, to heat for 10 or 15 minutes. While this is cooking, prepare a boiled salad dressing. When opening the fish, place a cloth over most of the can, make a small hole in the top to allow the steam to escape, and cut around the entire edge so that the fish can slide out without breaking, onto a hot platter. Pour the hot dressing over the salmon, sprinkle with finely chopped parsley, and serve at once. Fresh salmon may also be simmered and served in the same way.

Good quality silk is durable material, but it cannot be washed like cotton. Use only lukewarm water for silk garments, for both washing and rinsing. Make good suds of a neutral soap, and wash with as little rubbing as possible. Be careful that the silk does not come in contact with washing powders which bleach, because these powders may rot the material.

JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

Aims in Education

"Children must get things like these:

(1) Ability to read, to write, and to speak as well as is required from the average business man.

(2) Substantial knowledge of English and Arithmetic, and some real skill in penmanship.

(3) An appreciation of the importance of living a useful life.

(4) A fact foundation for the choice of a future career.

(5) A desire to conform to common practices observed as a matter of course by sensible people.

(6) To realize that there must be a purpose in life and a goal towards which one is striving.

"The key-note of the Junior High school is to discover the individual differences of the children, and to capitalize their special aptitudes."

The Civics classes have taken the responsibility for collecting the news items for this column. John Lynch represents S. F. Norman Hansen 8 E. Julius Ostrawski 8 B. Robert McLaren 8 C. They have chosen assistants from grade seven, as follows: Frederick Stott 7 A. 1, Kellogg Boynton 7 A. 2, Wilfred Moriarty 7 B, Francis Sparks 7 C.

The Student Council has decided to undertake the establishment of a Code of Honor. The first feature decided upon is Scholarship.

The regular Traffic Squad is being organized. Richard Cooper has been chosen captain.

Report cards made their first appearance this week and interest in them is keen. Pupils on trial are in various states of mind.

Football practice continues in earnest. Fewer interschool games are being played this season, however.

Armistice Day falls on Monday this year and since it is now a legal holiday in our state exercises appropriate to the occasion were held on Friday afternoon at quarter of three o'clock, when members of the Legion were guests.

The program was in charge of the Dramatic club.

The opening speech was made by Frances McTernan, president of the club.

This was followed by a recitation, "Armistice Day" by Betty Deyermund, "In Flanders Fields" by George Rodway and "America's Answer" by Robert McLaren were given "In Memoriam."

"Another Holiday", a dialogue was written by S. F. in English, and presented by members of the club.

Report of the Superintendent of Public Works for October, 1929

The following report of work accomplished during the month of October was given by Superintendent Charles T. Gillard at the recent meeting of the Board of Public Works:

WATER DEPARTMENT

A six-inch fire line is being installed from Abbott street to Draper hall, and also an additional hydrant on Abbott street in the vicinity of the fire station.

It is possible to pump from the hydrant into the fire-line thereby giving additional water should emergency require. The cost of this work is to be paid by Abbott academy.

The line of the telemeter wires which formerly were run on poles from the corner of Morten and Bartlett streets along Chapel street to Chapel avenue, along Chapel avenue to Main street, thence southerly along Main street to the corner of Salem street, has been relocated, and now runs on poles from the corner of Bartlett street and Morten street to Main street, thence underground in a southerly direction to the corner of Salem street and Main street. This work was paid for by Phillips academy and made it possible to remove the unsightly wooden poles on Chapel avenue.

Because of the continued dry spell a 2-inch line has been installed on Chapel street near the dead end, thus obviating the necessity of sending an employee of the Town to open the hydrant whenever water is required.

A new pipe leading from the telemeter house to the reservoir has been installed. This pipe is over 10 feet below the surface of the reservoir when the reservoir is filled. The old pipe leading to the reservoir from the telemeter house was broken due to a sudden rush of water when the hydrant at the corner of Main street and Bancroft road was broken.

The oldest water services on Red Spring road were renewed in the way of the bed prior to the construction of the new road.

HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT

The building of a section of Red Spring road was completed in October. Considerable ledge was encountered in the vicinity of the drying sheds of Smith & Dove which necessitated blasting. The drilling of the holes for the dynamite was done with the compressor owned by the Lawrence Gas & Electric Co.

River road, North street, Angilla road, Webster street, Lowell Junction road, Dasmor road and Tewksbury street were scraped this past month.

The sides of Lowell street and High street were patched in many places to prevent the road-bed from breaking away.

Warrenton top sidewalks have been built this past month on Binney street, Fletcher street, and Summer street. The sidewalk on Andover street, Ballardvale, from the Colonial hall room to Parker's store has been resurfaced, and the sidewalk on High street, Ballardvale, has likewise been treated.

At this season of the year fallen leaves are a menace to motor traffic especially when the roads are wet. Every effort is being made to promptly remove or burn them.

SEWER DEPARTMENT

Aside from general routine work there is nothing of particular importance to report.

PARK DEPARTMENT

Careful attention has been given to maintaining the Park. Fallen leaves are being removed promptly and the marking on the football field has been renewed.

Witchcraft Superstition

The Chinese or American Indians never conducted an organized campaign against witchcraft in any way comparable to that carried on in Europe in the middle centuries or in America in the early history of the country, but there is ample proof that the Jews from earliest times placed witchcraft under the ban of the law, and among the earliest laws given by Moses is the one "Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live."

Washington News Letter and Comment

Current motion pictures show Mussolini telling his followers what the Fascist government has done during the six or seven years of its existence. He sees in his country "an army of citizens and soldiers prepared for the work of peace or the work of war, industrious, silent, and of discipline." The late Nicholas Silver in the days of old Russia. The Duke thinks that Italy finally is as he has wished it to be. One man's ideas seldom will suffice for the foundation of a state. It is questionable whether Washington or Lincoln would find present day American life moving along quite to his liking. Time makes ancient good and bad.

Imperial Caesar, dead, and turned to clay, Which stop a hole to keep the wind away.

Mussolini and his ideas are not more permanent.

The slump in the stock market has been definitely and finally checked—again.

The census of 1930 is to be employed as an instrument for finding out what the people are thinking about the five-day working week. The possibilities of the census as a means for probing the public mind, are unlimited. In the quiet of his own home, a man is apt to speak his views plainly and truthfully, and there is no escape from an election wherein the polls are moved from house to house and set up for the time being in the front parlor, in the field, or by the kitchen sink.

Pirates who emptied a Greek vessel in the Black Sea, operated from a steamer. They carried an airplane to spy on the prey. Even pirates have the romance taken out of it. Think of trying to fit an airplane into Robert Louis Stevenson's "Treasure Island."

A hundred and sixty thousand Pennsylvania coal miners knock off for a day in remembrance of John Mitchell, who carried half-dozen and brought about a ten per cent wage raise. Of all the diggers in the ground, the farmer alone awaits relief and a day of anniversary rejoicing for the passing of an old and grinding order of things.

The Germans, who write businessaboutan inheritance as one word in their vernacular, would have no trouble with hexamethylene-tamine, a name which threw the Senate into confusion lately, when the question of raising the duty on it came up. It seems as though the substance might as well be called Smith's vulcanite or something else which would not cause a verbal slip whenever the vehicle of spoken language ran unexpectedly upon it.

A city policeman who arrested a federal agent for speeding, was taken in hand for interfering with an officer in the discharge of his duty. While the row was on, the commonwealth was deprived of the services of two officials whose efforts, presumably, were needed by the body politic. The division of constabulary powers between state and nation never has operated with perfect satisfaction, and presents a growing problem which sooner or later will have to be dealt with on a definite and broadly new basis.

The rite of sacrifice seems to be a part of the vague shipping-world ceremony called the close of navigation on the Great Lakes. In the region the stretches from Duluth to Buffalo, the half-dozen boats are sunk or broken to pieces, and a half-hundred lives are lost in a storm, which has swept the North. Far from the coasts of the Atlantic and the Pacific, in the midst of a thickly settled continent, Nature directs tragedy in the direction of the popular imagination with the ocean only, and is exacting the toll which will be collected forever from those who go down to the sea in ships.

In Maryland, autos have been held up and searched without warrant, in an effort to stop the traffic in liquor. An Illinois judge imposes a fine on a grocer who sells malted syrup, knowing that it was to be used in making home brew. A court sitting in Kentucky advises that buyers of whiskey can be indicated, along with the sellers. The present teaching and minute enforcement of the prohibition act. Appeals may be expected, and a better understanding of the 18th amendment and perhaps a peace of the sort which the country has not known since the date on which it went dry.

In connection with the theft of two ten thousand dollar bills, the police of an eastern city "point out" that it is extremely uncommon to find paper of that denomination in the hands of most people. Let us forget, for this down a piece of information that may come in handy later.

The latest offering of applied science is a means whereby a passenger in an airplane can converse with places so widely separated as Minneapolis and New York. If Paul Revere had been supplied with modern conveniences, he could have roused the entire thirteen colonies on his midnight ride.

The person who lures husband or wife from the straight path of the Seventh Commandment can be killed by the aggrieved partner in the marriage tie, according to the Mexican criminal code which is now coming of age. Mexico simply has reduced the so-called unwritten law to writing. No such law is recognized in the United States; but neither do we have any law, written or unwritten, which prevents a jury from scanning testimony that warrants self-defense. Upon the whole, Mexico, Minnesota and Malabar stand about on an equal footing as hot places for home-breakers, and the particular canon in force does not seem to be of great consequence.

A Louisville man, cornered by a maddened bovine which escaped from the stockyard, was so badly frightened that he did not stop to shoot the bull.

The valley of the Ohio is celebrating the operations that turned the river into a navigable stream having a nine-foot channel. It looks as though the day was not far distant when air craft will carry most passengers, and all merchandise excepting gross or slowly-moving freight. When that time comes, canal river carriers will stand on an equal footing with railroads in territory where both can operate, and the Ohio River people have an eye to the future in their promotion of inland navigation.

A woman apprehended in the middle west for stealing several hundred dollars worth of furniture, says that she did not need the goods and took them solely for the fun of outwitting the police. If outwitting the police is her idea of fun, her opportunities for fun arising out of this particular transaction have only begun.

Fifty years ago the electric lamp came into being. Mr. Edison, the inventor, is making a triumphant trip across the country, crowned with many crowns. No one has called him to answer for the passing of the picturesque gallon oil can, with a small potato impaled on the spout to prevent spilling. He is responsible, moreover, for the exit of the blue flame; and what has a modern grocery store to offer in the place of dried fish and possum aroma that came from the old time comestore oil? Joke-smiths, comic song writers and comedians have not forgotten that this is the man who did away with the smoky lamp. Silver was not demotized by grocery opposition, and a rival candidate for popularity may yet cast into Mr. Edison's teeth the fact that it was he who de-lighted the coal oil lamp.

A former cabinet officer is on trial in Washington for bribery. The prosecution says that millions of citizens think that he is a criminal who should be locked up in a federal prison. The attorney for the defense says that "national security runs like a thread of gold" through the contract which brought his client before the bar of justice, and many millions of citizens share that belief. No matter how the jury decides of the case, a large number of wise persons in all parts of the land, on whose opinions the humble have been content to rely, will stand convicted of having been wrong.

Word comes from the town of Dushanby in Tajikistan that the Tajiks have severed their political relations with Uzbekistan and set up an independent government. Few readers of this paper are in a position to say I told you so.

About the middle of the month, the stock market took its second tumble within two weeks. The account of the slump embodies a sentence which is as common as Didn't Know It Was Loaded, and quite as indicative of calamity: "Thousands of small traders were faced with margin calls demanding more cash or collateral." What took place after the calls were made would make a dismal story.

The President does not think much of the tariff bill, and the Senate and House cannot come to an agreement concerning it. The prophecy that it will die a natural death at the close of the present special session of Congress, seems likely to be fulfilled. The measure has afforded dull entertainment to small audiences for a short season, like "a poor player That struts and frets his hour upon the stage, And then is heard no more."

Boston & Maine Adds to the Area of Boston

A million cubic yards of new land, constituting an area of thirty-seven acres, will have been added today to the physical geography of Greater Boston by the Boston and Maine Railroad. When completed, this terminal development project, embracing parts of Cambridge, Somerville and Boston, will have created from the Charles and Millers Rivers 50 acres of land, an area greater than all of Boston Common.

The filling of the millionth cubic yard will be marked by the presence of President George H. Hanauer and Chief Engineer W. J. Backes of the railroad, to whom Division Engineer T. G. Sughrue will report formally the attainment of this stage of the big reclamation project. In the remaining one-third of the area to be reclaimed, 1,455,000 additional cubic yards of fill will be required.

This work of making solid the Boston and Maine's Boston terminals and approaches, after nearly a century of railroad operation over piling and trestles, has engaged the attention of thousands of passengers in and out of the North Station for over a year, and has been a matter of interest to civil engineers because of some of the new methods employed.

It becomes a part of the historical development of Greater Boston from water areas, the Back Bay and the North Station district having been among the important parts of present-day Boston added to the map by this succession of man-made reclamation projects. In 1825, it was dirt from Pemberton Hill that was used to fill the old North Mill Pond, creating the land which constitutes the area from Haymarket Square to the New North Station. Beacon Hill was partly levelled to create other areas in this general vicinity, and Asylum Hill and the area of the Boston and Maine's freight terminals is being fast cut away by the Boston and Maine to provide part of the fill which enters into the present extension of the territorial limits of Boston, Somerville and Cambridge.

This big job of making land grow where water flowed and is flowing and is not being accomplished without substantial compensation to the state, in addition to the railroad's expense of filling material. The railroad is paying the state for displacement in the areas to which the Boston and Maine holds the riparian rights, and it is cooperating with the state and federal and state governments the new harbor line, which provides a channel of 375 feet. All told, the project has cost the Boston and Maine $1,000,000 to date, and will aggregate $2,000,000 when completed.

The object of this great land-making operation is to give the railroad a solid basis for its Boston terminals, and thus cut heavy maintenance costs on present facilities, at the same time that it makes possible further terminal improvements. Although the New North Station itself has been completed, the present terminal as a whole is only partly finished.

To overcome the limitations of many years, the station platforms must be extended so that passengers on rear cars of the longer trains may alight on solid ground instead of getting out on trestles as they have for years. Other improvements in station platforms, in the platform coverings, in track approaches, and in the draw bridges which are included among the desirable features which the Boston and Maine management hopes to work out, it is stated, although these facilities can not be definitely entered upon for some time because of the considerable expense involved. It has been estimated that these added improvements which will bring no added revenues to the railroad, may well cost as much as the North Station itself.

The plans of the railroad include also an extension of its modern freight facilities adjacent to the present East Cambridge terminals; and in the area adjacent to Warren Bridge, on the Boston side, railroad facilities and highly desirable locations for industries with railroad sidings.

The extent to which this part of Greater Boston has been involved in the growth of the city by reclamation is disclosed by old charts, which show "Charles River Bay" as a water area which stretched from a mill pond near Sullivan Square (with the water covering what is now Rutherford Avenue), making a peninsula of Lechmere Point, East Cambridge, and with the water flowing to the foot of Asylum Hill, which was the site of the McLean Insane Hospital. Water once flowed over practically all of what constitutes the present Cambridge-Somerville-Charles-town-Fruit Point bridge actually spanned Charles River Bay instead of the present network of railroad tracks.

After nearly a century in which filling operations reclaimed some of these waters, but with some sixty-one acres of the Boston and Maine and constituent railroads' terminal area still on piling, the present railroad management decided in 1927 that expensive maintenance could be saved and afforded opportunities for improvements would be afforded by a filling operation along the lines which have since been carried out.

For more than a year and a half the steam shovel has been working away at Asylum Hill, better known, perhaps, to the present generation as the place where the big Western Union sign was located, and dump cars have carried it towards the North Station. Debris from various other places has been used with that from Asylum Hill.

Passengers in and out of the North Station are already riding over Boston's old Post-Office square having joined that which was Asylum Hill. On six miles of track along Fitchburg Station; the debris from the building torn down to make room for the new United Shoe Machinery building at Federal and High streets, and other debris brought here from various parts of the Boston and Maine system where grading and grading work has been done; and from other places in Boston where new buildings have been erected, contractors have hauled filling material.

A pile driver has, in the last few days, been exciting curiosity of travelers over the Northern Artery and of street car passengers to and from Lechmere Square over the viaduct. It is performing the preliminary work for a new sea wall, which will mark the new channel lines of the Charles River between the Charles River basin and the Boston and Maine drawbridges.

In all, when the filling is completed, the Boston and Maine will have moved filling material equivalent to a mound the size of the New North Station, and 400 feet high; or a block that would be as wide as the New Boston and Maine station and within 100 feet of the height of the Custom House Tower. In the 1,000,000 blocks of granite, pleted there are many tons of steel, whole sections of walls, together with a general mass of debris and dirt, including almost every conceivable kind of building material.

Underneath one section of this mass, the Millers River is kept flowing by an ingenious installation of concrete pipe, concrete pipes, 6 feet in diameter, through which the waters of the Charles and the Millers River basin flow back and forth. This giant culvert permits the tide water to flow to and from the Millers River and the Millers River Basin, underneath parts of the river which have already been reclaimed.

Boston and Maine engineers surveying for the costly fill have found that some of the original oak piles which were driven for the trestles under the tracks of the Boston & Lowell Railroad are still in place. Practically all of them have been cut down or built up several times.

Considering Posterity

Old Miltux—Want to marry my daughter, do you? Think I'll make a nice, comfortable father-in-law, eh?

Young Alverne—No, I don't; but I'm going into this thing with my eyes open. What worries me is that I've picked a pretty rough grandfather for my innocent children.

When Little Bobby was taken to the hospital to see his newly arrived baby sister he was highly delighted with her. He regarded her with beaming approval, taking in the fascinating details of her fuzzy nubs and the little numbered identification disk on a cord around her neck. This infant he regarded for some time, and then said: "Well, when are they going to take the price-mark off of her?"

ROGER W. BABSON SAYS RESIDENTIAL BUILDING IS HIT BY TIGHT MONEY

Unsatisfactory Mortgage Market Chief Cause of Decline as Well as Some Over-Building of Residences—Improvement Depends upon Lowering of Money Rates—May Be Bargains in Foreclosure Sales

Babson Park, Massachusetts, November 8, 1929. Statistics clearly indicate that building is on a downward trend. Except for a brief recovery about mid-year, 1929 has witnessed an almost constant falling off in building contracts awarded compared with 1928. The decline became very pronounced in September which was 25 per cent under a year ago and ten per cent lower than August. Residential building has been hit the hardest for two reasons. (1) Speculative construction is mostly of a residential character and particularly sensitive to high interest rates and heavy carrying charges. (2) There are plenty of new residences to supply the demand and in some cases cities have definitely over-built along this line.

This does not mean that a panic necessarily will ensue in the building industry. The growth of the population will always require building of new homes. A temporary breathing spell, however, appears to have come.

Mortgage Money Scarce

Moreover, history of building operations shows clearly that they fluctuate in volume with the trend of interest rates. In the past ten years building has always responded to low rates and has continued in high volume just as long as money was easy. Conversely, severe tightening in money, even though comparatively temporary, has always caused recession in building. We are now faced with a situation where mortgage money has become both high and scarce. The drastic liquidation in the stock market which we have seen recently will tend to ease credit to some extent. The drop in the discount rate indicates this. However, interest rates are still high in comparison with recent years.

Financing Charges Burdensome

Particularly burdensome to new building operations are the bonuses demanded on construction loans, running sometimes as high as fifteen per cent. This practice has been going on for some time, but as long as property could be sold easily, speculative builders were willing to pay these charges in the hope of passing them along to the buyer. Now, however, when the building shortage has been fully made up, property moves slower and the heavy financing charges become unbearable. This results in foreclosure sales by first and second mortgagees on speculative property. There may indeed be excellent opportunities uncovered within the next few months to buy in good residential properties at attractive prices because of forced selling.

Second Mortgages Affected

As one would naturally expect, the second mortgages are now even more difficult to place and entail heavy discounts and high interest rates. Developers of subdivisions usually plan to put up second mortgages as collateral for funds with which to start new building. Now it is necessary to pay such high rates and to accept such great discounts on these mortgages that there is little incentive for carrying on new developments. Discounts as high as forty per cent on second mortgages are common. Inasmuch as a large part of our total building is done for speculation it is natural that we should now experience a marked decline in operations.

Home Builder in the Best Position

The man who is building a home is in a preferred position today. Banks which hesitate to loan for speculation are willing to go far for the man who is building his own home. This assumes, of course, that the man has a good reputation in the community. In fact, present conditions may become more favorable than unfavorable for such a builder. If a man is putting in a fairly good equity he will find the banks ready to co-operate with him. Also he obtains the benefit of more favorable contract prices from builders who are anxious to keep their organizations intact during the dull winter period. Naturally under such conditions building material prices are lower, and efficiency of labor is greater. Hence, the man building for a home may find that this is an opportune rather than an inopportune time to do so.

Bargains in Real Estate May Be Uncovered

The crash in the stock market may have a definite effect on real estate. The public was in this stock market as never before and the public has suffered more than the professional from the decline. Hence, some distress selling may come in the residential real estate market as a result of stock market losses. There should be uncovered some very good bargains in desirable properties. Of course, in the long run the severe lesson taught by the stock market decline should be beneficial to building and real estate. It will tend to ease money and people will begin to think of something else besides buying stocks.

Ultimately this money situation will change and lower rates once more prevail. This change may require some time, but the economic history of interest rates is sure to repeat itself. Furthermore, scaling down in construction now should prove a salutary development because it will give the demand for new building a chance to catch up with the supply. The fundamental growth of the country's population alone will take care of that; also well situated land is steadily rising in value. There is only so much desirable land and there will never be any more. However, this is no time for speculation in building, real estate, or anything else! The man who performs the real service today, and the one who will reap rewards for such service, is the man who uses his cash to buy good bonds or to build his own home. By doing the former he will help to stabilize the security market, and by doing the latter he will aid in preventing a more drastic decline in the building industry.

Business by the Babsonchart is now three per cent above normal compared with ten per cent above a year ago.

Frederick The Great's Forest Fire Penalties

Starting a forest fire in the days of Frederick the Great meant a heavy fine or jail sentence for some one, according to historical data recently reviewed by the Forest Service of the United States Department of Agriculture.

American foresters have long deplored the general public disregard of forest values, the indifference to damage by fire or promiscuous cutting, but they have never urged the infliction of severe penalties upon persons guilty of such damage. It is sometimes felt, however, that the penalty imposed in a particular case is a heavy one. By contrast with the earlier laws of countries where the vital relationship of forest to public welfare was first recognized, present-day penalties for violations of forestry laws in this country are mild.

Excerpts from a proclamation of King Frederick, Berlin, December 3, 1775, show some of the severities in his forest laws for East Prussia:

"Anyone starting a fire in or within 100 paces of a forest, or using a pitch torch or any fire when fishing or catching crawfish in any lakes within and on streams or creeks flowing through a forest, or who smokes tobacco during the dry or summer season within a forest, even though no damage is done, shall be punished with a 4-week jail or penitentiary sentence, and, if any damage results, shall pay such damage, if he can not pay the damage, the period of imprisonment shall be in proportion to the amount of damage ascertained, up to 100 thaler ($75), one-fourth year; from 100 to 200 thaler ($75 to $150), one-half year; and 200 thaler and over, 1 year imprisonment.

"Any person wilfully or maliciously starting a fire in a forest, with intent of damage such forest, shall be punished with a 10-year penitentiary sentence at hard labor, and upon establishing the moral responsibility the sentence may be increased even to a death penalty. Anyone discovering and reporting such evildoer shall receive a reward of 50 thaler."

The present-day attitude of Germany toward forest fires is indicated in the trial, reported by the Deutsche Forstzeitung, of a 15-year old boy who wilfully started a fire that burned several thousand acres. Because of his youth, he was sentenced to only three weeks in jail. In addition, however, he must report to the State forester at the beginning of each planting season, from 1929 to 1931, and must work without pay during the entire season.

Here, There, Everywhere

A group of tourists was looking over the inferno of Vesuvius in full eruption.

"Ain't this just like hell?" ejaculated a Yank.

"Ah, zese Americans," exclaimed a Frenchman, "where have zey not been!"

More Considerate

The local church was making a drive for funds, and two colored sisters were calling on Uncle Rastus.

"I can't give nothin'," exclaimed the old negro. "I owes everybody in this here town now."

"But," said one of the collectors, "don't you think you owe the Lord something too?"

"I does, sister, indeed," said the old man, "but He ain't pushing me like the other creditors is."

"Have you any overnight cases?"

"Yes, ma'm—plenty."

"Give me seven, then, I'll be gone at least a week."

Andover Soccer Team Beats Exeter

With every man on the team excelling, Andover beat Exeter in a whirlwind soccer game on Wednesday. Dorman's goal in the last few minutes of play was the only score on either side. Seton, Exeter's goal guard, was constantly warding off Blue attempts, and only once, when Cowee blocked him out of the play, did the ball get by his guard. The two captains, Fawcett of Andover and Brooks of Exeter, were everywhere at once touching several times, advancing toward the opposite goal, monopolized the ball for almost a minute at a time. On the defensive Lang surpassed for the victors, and Seton and Weaver for the Exeter team. On the offensive Fawcett, Wolcott, and Dorman steadily threatened to drive the ball through Seton; but the goalie was too quick for them.

FIRST HALF

Fry, Andover having won the toss-up, kicked off; and the two teams went into a prolonged scrimmage in the center of the field. Finally, Butler worked out of the melee with the ball and executed a beautiful pass to Murray, who made the first attempt to score. Thompson stopped the ball and kicked to mid-field, but Fawcett dribbled all the way down again for another try; Seton saved the goal, but immediately Butler was again threatening, and from then on Seton was kept busy. First Fawcett drove from right in front of the posts; then Fry kicked from the corner; Seton fell, reaching with the very tips of his fingers Dorman's follow-up, and saving a point by less than two inches. Exeter came within scoring distance only once, when Brooks took the ball from Murray and passed diagonally across the field to Sugimura, the Japanese forward, who made a quick and almost successful try for a point. The scrimmage was immediately carried back to Exeter territory, where it remained, with frequent close calls for the Red and Gray, until the end of the period.

SECOND HALF

Weaver kicked, but the ball was carried right back into the Exeter domain and Fawcett missed a corner shot. In this period Exeter, with the wind behind it, frequently worried Monro but never became a serious danger. Sugimura, Thompson, and Watson, took long shots in quick succession, but Monro returned them all, and the Blue forwards soon had the ball under control once more. There was considerable excitement at the Exeter goal for a time, when ten men went down in a heap; but Seton emerged from the very bottom of the pile, and the ball was in Andover territory before the others were on their feet. King drove to Monro, who had to dive for the ball. Fawcett weaved back and forth past all opposition until he was within kicking distance, when there was wild confusion as one short kick after another was stopped a few inches from the line.

Then an Exeter man committed one of the few fouls of the game, and Fawcett was given a free kick from Exeter's right corner. Cowee took Seton out of the way with a body check, and Dorman, coming under the ball with his head, made the point that won the game. After one more threat to both goals, the final whistle blew, and the 1929 soccer season closed with the Blue team victor by the score of 1-0.

Exeter's New Stadium to Be Scene of 50th Annual Contest Both Teams Confident

Tomorrow a confident Andover team, supported by the entire school, will travel into Exeter territory for the final and major game of the season, the 50th annual meeting of the two Phillips academies on the gridiron. Andover-Exeter contests have become traditional, not only for the two schools but for the towns of Andover and Exeter as well; perhaps no preparatory school game is more eagerly awaited or more enthusiastically attended.

The game tomorrow will be especially significant not only because it marks a half century of Andover-Exeter football, but also because it will be the first game to be played in Exeter's new stadium, the Plimpton Playing Fields-Beyond, which will be dedicated at the game. The concrete stadium, seating six thousand people, will take the place of the old wooden stands, which were not sufficient for the accommodation of the many spectators.

The eleven men on whom Andover will place its hopes are the usual result of Mr. Shepard's coaching, a smoothly working unit that is determined to win tomorrow if it is in the realm of possibility. In any way, it averages 172 pounds can hold out a line that averages twenty pounds more, the Andover line will do it; Line-coach Benton has been working wonders with his light material and has succeeded in offsetting the weight handicap by speed in both thinking and acting. Coach Billhardt has developed a fast and heady backfield, whose superior aerial attack should balance Exeter's fifteen pound backfield advantage. Of the eleven men who will probably start the game, ten won their letters last year, when Andover triumphed by the score of 18 to 0 over as heavy a team as Exeter's of this season.

Captain Crane, who was responsible last year for the failure of many of Exeter's center rushes, which it was thought would succeed because of its extra weight, will once more take his place in the center of the line. He will be supported on the left and on the right by Gardner and Davis respectively. Gardner, alternating with Wilson, has done much of the work on the kick-off and may put the ball into play tomorrow. Davis has proved his merit, especially on the defense. At left and right tackles will be Jackson and Potter. Jackson, a resident of Andover, is the heaviest man on the squad, although he weighs only 190 pounds; Exeter will have its Exeter Be a free kick from Exeter's right corner. Cowee took Seton out of the way with a body check, and Dorman, coming under the ball with his head, made the point that won the game. After one more threat to both goals, the final whistle blew, and the 1929 soccer season closed with the Blue team victor by the score of 1-0.

At the receiving end of Andover's many passes Kimball and Broca have proved one of the main sources of ground-gaining for the team, and once too often for Exeter academy. Broca was found on the receiving end of one of their passes, which he intercepted behind his own goal line to run 102 yards for a touchdown. Kimball, the lightest man on the squad, covered himself with glory last year by his splendid blocking of three of Exeter's kicks, all of which resulted in touchdowns for the Blue team. At the end of the third quarter he stopped the ball far in Exeter's territory, and after two ineffectual line plays, a 29-yard pass to Brown brought Andover within two feet of the goal line, and Viviano plunged across on the first play of the last period.

In this quarter Kimball blocked two more of Exeter's punts; the first time he picked up the ball himself and ran for a touchdown, and the second time Westall recovered it and crossed the line. Tomorrow Clark, the Exeter star half-back, who will be responsible for Kimball on Andover's defense, will try to prevent a repetition of the disaster to the Red and Gray kicking.

The merits of the backfield cover all the wide which a good backfield should cover; Brown's quick thinking, King's speed, Keesling's kicking and interfering, and Wilson's passing should prove a constant source of apprehension to the eleven men who will attempt to render useless these abilities. Scarcely a more capable or plucky backfield is needed than Brown's. Of the halves King is a ten-second man, and Keesling can kick fifty-five yards, five yards further than half the length of the field. Wilson, at fullback, has done much of the kicking this year, and his distance and accuracy in forwards may pave the way for Blue scoring.

The Exeter team is confident also because of its weight, its preliminary record, and the support it has received from Boston and Lawrence papers. As a whole the eleven is much heavier than the Blue, but not as fast, nor does it have the individual merit of the Andover men. At the three center positions will be Mayo, the comparatively light but reliable center; Meffert, the veteran right guard, who played opposite Houston last year; and Waite, the left guard. Captain Lane, the smashing right tackle, had opposite him in last year's game an Andover football captain, Osborne; this year the captain of the Blue is Captain May, who played a remarkable game. The halves, Check and Clark, are not unusually fast but of excellent broken field runners. Spain, who in addition to his football prowess has starred for Exeter in hockey and baseball, will fill quarterback; he will be a hard man to stop.

Statistically it would seem that Exeter has the better team, but statistics do not mean anything in Andover-Exeter games. Last year the numbers were even more against the Blue; the final score was a surprise to the majority of the Boston and Lawrence papers, who predicted an Exeter victory weeks before the game. So far as chances to win go, two equal teams will face each other tomorrow, the Red and Gray fully determined to avenge the defeat, the Blue equally resolute to add another triumph to their record.

The Masters took two points from the leading Marshals Tuesday night in the Square and Compass Club league winning the second string and total. It was the first time this season the Marshals lost the pinfall. M. K. Downing hit 117 and 316 and J. Higginson 114 and 315.

The Deacons after taking the first string lost the next two and the pinfall by 115 to the Stewards who hit 1851, eight shy of the record. Peters, Baker and Sherman hit 327, 326 and 322. J. Christie and B. Thornton led the Deacons with 316 and 317.

The Wardens took four from the Tylers with L. Johnson hitting 311 and R. Dobbie 310. J. Ryle was grand tyler with 111 and 319.
